Report of Mr. R. Bourke, the Treasury Representative in Ireland under the Arrears of Rent Act.

My Lords, Dublin, June 29, 1883.

At the conclusion of my employment as your Lordships' representative in Ireland under the Arrears of Rent (Ireland) Act, 1882, I have the honour of submitting the following report of my proceedings :—

In your Lordships' letter of the 29th August 1882, informing me of my temporary appointment to initiate the representation of the Treasury, pursuant to section 5 of the Act, a general indication was given of the duties I should have to discharge in endeavouring to protect the Department from frauds that might possibly be attempted against the Exchequer. In carrying out this object I was to exercise my own discretion and avail myself, when necessary, of the assistance which had been indicated to me.

The Arrears Act received the royal assent on the 18th August, and the Land Commission shortly after issued their rules under the 23rd section of the Act for giving effect to its provisions. Forms were prepared on which applications were to be made in two distinct ways :—

(1.) Joint applications by landlords and tenants supported by affidavits from each, setting out all facts necessary to the consideration of their case, and showing that the preliminary conditions laid down by the Act were duly observed.

These, it was provided, should be examined in the office and reported on by investigators specially assigned for the duty.

(2.) Applications sent in by tenants or landlords separately, which, not being on oath, were to be remitted for local investigation to the districts where they arose, and reported on to the Land Commissioners, as regarded their compliance with the preliminary conditions, by officers specially appointed for the purpose.

The rules further provided that, on receipt of the reports, conditional orders should be issued by the Land Commissioners on each case.

By the concluding paragraph of the 5th section of the Act the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury were authorised to be represented at any inquiry under the Act by any person nominated by them for such office, and it was provided by the 9th rule of the Land Commissioners that notice of every conditional order made by the Commissioners upon joint applications should be served on the Treasury, who might, within certain limits of time, require any case to be locally investigated before the order was made absolute.

In like manner in the second or separate class of cases it was provided that notice of every investigation should be given to the Treasury with a view of affording the Department an opportunity of being represented if thought desirable, and likewise that a similar notice of the issue of each conditional order should be given as in the case of joint applications.

The duty devolving on your Lordships' representative appeared, therefore, to be to examine carefully into the particulars of all joint applications, availing himself, where requisite, of any sources of information at his disposal for determining their character, and, in the case of separate applications, not supported by affidavit, to arrange for the representation of the Treasury at the hearing of any case where it might seem necessary.

For my assistance in examining applications and carrying out correspondence connected with them, I was allowed by your Lordships a small staff of clerks, and for the representation of the Department at local investigations I had authority to call in the Sessional Crown Solicitors in their several counties, and later on in the proceedings, four Auditors under the Local Government Board.

The first notice of the issue of a conditional order on a joint application of landlord and tenant was served on me on the 27th September 1882, and similar notices continued to be sent in till the 27th October, when they were suspended in order to make room for separate applications which called for greater despatch. They, however, were resumed about the middle of December.

These joint applications have all been scrutinized in this office. Any that appeared of a doubtful character were made the subject of confidential local inquiries. Where the information thus obtained was of a satisfactory character the papers were returned to the Arrears Office, and the claims put in train for payment. Where otherwise a demand was made on part of the Treasury for a local investigation, the grounds for such demands being either, (1) fraud or collusion suspected, or (2) apparent ability on part of the tenant to discharge the arrears without loss of his interest or the means of duly cultivating his holding.

In the vast majority of joint applications no doubts arose as to the character of the claims. On large properties managed by the owners themselves or by respectable land agents the applications were carefully prepared, and the details of each case set out and supported in such a way as to leave no doubt of their merits, and on smaller estates there was often sufficient internal evidence of accuracy to justify the immediate allowance of the claim. It was in comparatively rare instances that it became necessary to call for local investigations. On such occasions the Treasury was, for the most part, represented by me, or, where I was unable to attend, by the Sessional Crown Solicitor, or an Auditor of the Local Government Board. The inquiries held on my demand numbered 151, and were attended with varying results. In some cases, where collusion was suspected, the evidence at the hearing disclosed only grave irregularities sufficient to lead to the dismissal of the cases, but not enough to stamp the transactions with deliberate fraud. In some instances, the landlord was a person in business, and contrived so to mix up his trade and his rent transactions as to make it impossible to distinguish one from the other; and the uncertainty under what head the tenant was indebted to the landlord removed the cases from the operation of the Arrears Act, into which they were probably brought with fraudulent design. In other cases, the rent books and accounts were so imperfectly kept that it was impossible to say more than that the preliminary conditions laid down in the Act had not been proved. In one set of cases which I attended no rentals or books could be produced: the state of each tenant's account depended on the recollection of the parties, and was confused by payments on account or in labour to such an extent that no correct balance could be struck. Both sides agreed that there were arrears due to a greater or lesser extent, and were prepared to wipe them out if (to use their own expression) they could "draw a year's rent from the Government." The property in this case was of course not a large one, representing a rental of about 500*l.* or 600*l.*, but in its utter confusion and mismanagement must, I hope, be looked upon as exceptional. Upon the whole it is satisfactory to note that, as far as I have been able to judge, a small proportion only of the claims was tainted with fraud or supported by misrepresentation.

In the other class of cases, where the tenant's inability to discharge his arrears seemed open to doubt, much difficulty at times arose. The judgment of investigators differed in regard to the relative proportion to be required between the arrears and the tenant's available resources, and the tenants themselves did not always give candid or truthful testimony. But no flagrant cases of misrepresentation were brought to light, and the tenants whose claims were disallowed appeared often to be so little removed from those pronounced to be entitled to the relief that it was not easy to distinguish between them. The close scrutiny given to the cases was, however, important to the safe administration of the Act.

The separate applications of tenants were more numerous than might have been expected, but it soon appeared that this arose from no opposition on part of the landlords, but from the eagerness of the tenant to secure the advantages offered by the Act even before he had actually qualified himself by paying his year's rent within the time specified. To deal with such applications promptly, and bring home to the tenants the necessity of satisfying the 1881 rent before the 30th November 1882, the Land Commissioners organised a very large number of Investigators' Courts during the months of October and November—as many as 56 sometimes sitting on the same day.

The representation of the Treasury by experienced men at the earliest of these investigations appeared to me of much importance, as the investigators possessed for the most part but little acquaintance with the mode of conducting such inquiries. I therefore took steps for securing the attendance of the Sessional Crown Solicitors at such of the first investigations as I deemed to be the most important, and issued to each of them a letter of instructions, of which I append a copy. Thus between the 1st October and 30th November the Treasury was represented at 70 investigations, of which reports were duly furnished by the person engaged. Those reports were carefully examined by me, and, where appearing to contain matter important to the due determination of the claim, formed the subject of letters addressed by me to the Land Commissioners, which were considered in conjunction with the investigators' reports.

I am convinced that the greatest advantage resulted from the employment of these representatives of the Treasury, more especially in the power which their independent position gave them of assisting the investigators and moulding the proceedings into the most convenient and effectual form. But when I considered that object attained, I partially discontinued a proceeding which was necessarily costly, and limited the attendance of the Crown Solicitors to occasions where from any peculiarity of circumstances I considered a competent representation of the Treasury of importance to the due administration of the Act. When there was no such attendance I confined the action of the Treasury to the review of the cases when made the subject of conditional orders, showing cause against any where there appeared to be a miscarriage of justice, and in some cases availing myself of the power of appeal.

In this manner I have endeavoured to exercise the superintending and controlling powers which it was apparently intended should be used by your Lordships in the disposal of the large amount of public money involved in the operation of this Act.

In the foregoing remarks I have avoided entering more fully into details than was necessary to place the general course of my proceedings in a clear light before your Lordships. But I may be allowed to add that, from my observation, and from the information I have been able to procure, the objects contemplated by the Act have been in great measure attained. A very large number of extremely poor tenants have been relieved from an accumulation of rent which would otherwise have probably led to the loss of their holdings, and this has been effected not altogether gratuitously, nor without some exertion on their own parts, for in a large proportion of cases the payment of a twelvemonth's rent within those limits of time which, under the terms of the Act, made it applicable to the year 1881 was a matter of the greatest difficulty. Unfortunately, this payment proved beyond the reach of many, who thus became excluded from the benefits of the Act; but, to the extent to which it has operated, it can scarcely be doubted that the Act has worked effectually and afforded to a large number of the very poorest classes of tenants valuable and timely relief.

At the close of my proceedings, as your Lordships' representative under this Act, I am desirous of placing on record the cordial terms on which the official intercourse between me and the Land Commissioners has been carried on, and the ready consideration at all times given to such representations as, in the discharge of my duties, I had occasion frequently to bring before them.

I have, &c.

ENCLOSURE.

Instructions to Crown Solicitors.

Sir,

Referring to the circular letter, dated 11th September, addressed from the Chief Secretary's office to the Sessional Crown Solicitors for Ireland, I have now to inform you that investigations are appointed to be held in the county of next week, viz., at , at which, not being able to be present myself, I have to request you will be so good as to attend as representative of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

I enclose a paper showing the cases to be heard before the investigator at , and I proceed to indicate the course which it will be your duty to follow.

The chief points to be established at these investigations are:—

1. The amount of annual rent.
2. The amount of arrears owing up to the last gale day of 1880.
3. How and in what manner the rent for 1881 has been satisfied.
4. What may be the value of the tenants interest.
5. What property he is possessed of.

It will be the business of the investigator to bring these points out, and he will have before him the original applications in each case in which all particulars are set out. The investigator will no doubt at your request permit you to see those applications, and, as representing the Treasury, you will have the right of satisfying yourself regarding the particulars they contain in case they should not be made clear to you by the examinations in chief.

In the hearing of these cases it is probable that law points may arise upon various matters connected with the Act which it is unnecessary for me here to enumerate. These will be for the investigator to decide, but you will be at liberty to lay your views before him whenever you may find occasion to do so. But it is not the wish of the Treasury that any technical difficulties should be raised in giving to all parties interested the full benefits intended for them by the statute, subject only to the conditions under which they are offered. Your duty will be to see that, as far as may be, the performance of the conditions is established in evidence.

When the cases have been heard or disposed of, and the investigation is closed, you will be so good as to inform me of the result in any form that may appear to you most convenient, calling special attention to anything you may consider it important for me in the interests of the Treasury to know.

And if any general observations occur to you, I shall be happy to receive them, and give them my fullest consideration.

I have, &c.

To Sessional Crown Solicitor. (Signed) R. Bourke.

JUDGMENT of the Right Honourable the Lord Chief Justice in the Cases of ex parte Seymour v. Davitt, ex parte Bearns v. Healy, and ex parte Seymour v. Quinn, delivered on the 24th day of January 1883.

(Reported by Jones H. Stavely, Barrister-at-Law.)

IN these cases application has been made in this Court by the Attorney General, that M. Davitt, T. Healy, and P. Quinn, should be ordered to enter into security for their good behaviour. The motion was made on the 3rd of last December, and affidavits were then sworn in the presence of the respondents. On that occasion Mr. Davitt applied for time to prepare his defence, and, as I understood, to obtain the assistance of counsel.

This application the Crown did not oppose, and accordingly the hearing was postponed for 10 days. It appeared, however, that a Divisional Court could not be constituted at the time then fixed, and the hearing was postponed until these sittings. On the second day of these sittings the Attorney General mentioned the case, but the hearing was again postponed owing to the absence of Mr. Justice Barry at the winter assizes; upon that occasion a gentleman stated in court that Mr. Davitt was then absent in England, and was expected to be in Dublin on the Tuesday following, and on that Tuesday the hearing took place. I mention these dates as it was suggested by Mr. Davitt that he had not had notice of the time of hearing. Neither Mr. Davitt nor Mr. Healy apparently obtained any professional assistance, but made speeches on their own behalf. Mr. Quinn was represented by Mr. Adams as his counsel. Counsel for Mr. Quinn contended that this court did not possess original jurisdiction to order sureties for good behaviour to be given, though it was admitted that the court did possess such original jurisdiction in cases of sureties to keep the peace. The origin of the jurisdiction to order sureties for good behaviour is usually attributed to the English statute 34 Edward III., c. 1, which is to the following effect:—1st. That in every county of England there shall be assigned, for the keeping of the peace, one lord, and with him three or four of the most worthy of the county, with some learned in the law; among other functions which these persons were directed to discharge in the way of repressing evil doers, "they were directed to take of all them that be not of good name sufficient surety and mainprize of their good behaviour towards the King and his people." That upon the construction of this statute justices of the peace, appointed by the ordinary commission, possess jurisdiction in proper cases to order sureties for good behaviour to be given, is not, and could not, be disputed. This court has on several occasions been recently called on to consider the law on this subject, and particularly in the cases of Reg. v. the Justices of Cork (Reynolds' case), 10 L. R. Ir. 1, and Reg. v. the Justices of the Queen's County (Feehan's case), reported at page 294 of the same volume; and it is sufficient to refer to those cases as showing the nature of this preventive jurisdiction, and I should much prefer referring to the judgment of Lord Fitzgerald in the latter case, to any judgment which I have pronounced. But with respect to the contention that this jurisdiction of ordering sureties to be given to be of good behaviour, though possessed by magistrates, is not possessed by this court, it is right to make a few observations. This court, and each member of it, are supreme conservators of the peace in every county in Ireland; they are so by immemorial prescription, and long before the statute of Edward III.; this statute does not mention or refer to the ordinary justices of the peace, but upon the construction of the Act it has been held to apply to them as conservators of the peace. It would seem, a multo fortiori, proper so to construe it, as to include this court, whose paramount office is the conservation of the peace throughout the country. In Burns' "Justice of the Peace," a book of considerable authority, it is laid down in treating of the surety of the peace. This surety of the peace every justice of the peace may take and command by a twofold authority: (1.) As a minister, commanded thereto by a higher authority, as when a writ of supplicavit out of the Chancery or Queen's Bench is delivered to him. (2.) As a judge, and by virtue of his office derived from his commission. This passage has reference to sureties for the peace; but Burns, and all the ancient writers on the subject, treat sureties for the peace and sureties for good behaviour as of near affinity and scarcely distinguishable; and Burns, in treating of sureties for good behaviour, cites a passage from Pulton, a contemporary of Lombard, in these terms:—"The surety for the good abearing is ordained for the preservation of the peace, and doth differ in nothing from that of the peace but that there is more difficulty in the performance of it, and the party bound may more easily slide into the peril and danger of it. The surety for the good abearing is most commonly granted in open sessions, or by two or three justices, or upon a supplicavit, and great cause shown and proved, it is granted in the Chancery or Queen's Bench." It would seem that in those early times, in cases of importance, application was made to the Court of Queen's Bench, not to the inferior tribunals, in cases of this nature. It appears to me, that if any doubt existed as to the jurisdiction of this court, it is removed by the statute 10 & 11 C. I., c. 10 (Irish), which corresponds with the statute of 21 James I. (English), which, reciting the inconvenience and hardship which the subjects had been put into by having process of the peace or good behaviour awarded against them in Chancery, or in the Queen's Bench, enacts that all process of the peace or good behaviour shall be void unless awarded in open court, and upon sworn declarations made in open court. It plainly appears from this statute that such process had issued frequently out of these superior courts, and had been abused, and the statute regulates the practice in the Queen's Bench, both as to sureties for the peace and for good behaviour. Assuming that the jurisdiction of this court exists, it is next to be considered whether on the present occasion, and as against the three respondents, it should be exercised. The charge against them is grounded on certain speeches severally made by them, by Mr. Davitt and Quinn, in the county of Meath, and by Mr. Healy, in the county of Carlow.

The affidavits of Charles Seymour and Patrick Bearns depose as to the existence for several years past of an agitation of an agrarian character in various parts of Ireland, and including the counties of Meath and Carlow; and state that in consequence of such agitation great excitement prevailed, and a combination had been set on foot against the payment of rents, and numerous crimes and outrages had been committed in various parts of the country. The affidavit of the said Charles E. Seymour proceeds to state that on the 26th November 1882 a meeting was held at Navan, in the county of Meath, summoned by placards; that such meeting was attended by four or five thousand persons, and that upon that occasion Michael Davitt made a speech, a few passages of which I will advert to. After mentioning an apprehended distress in some parts of Ireland, and that the periodical famines to which he declared this country subject were to be attributed to the system which permitted large portions of the land to be applied to grazing purposes, Mr. Davitt proceeds, "I say unless wise and just legislation should prevent its necessity, the time will come when the starving people of Donegal and Connemara will be told to march down in their serried phalanxes upon the plains, and seize the lands upon which to live like civilized beings in a Christian country." And after speaking of compelling the Government to support the people during the coming winter, he proceeds:—"I propose that in case Mr. Gladstone does not apply the surplus of the Arrears Act estimates to save the people, that no rent should be paid from November till next May; that out of this sum a portion should be placed in the National Relief Fund, by which to save our people from starvation." The first passage I have referred to seems to me to amount to an open attempt to procure certain legislation by the threat of a treasonable insurrection. It seems that this portion of the speech approaches very nearly to an open and advised speaking which would bring the utterer within the operation of the Treason Felony Act, 1848. The second recommends that in a probable event rents payable to the owners of lands should not be paid to those entitled, but should be confiscated. I do not think it necessary for me to characterize such language particularly, having regard to the recent unhappy history of this country. It is true that it is foolish and absurd. It is very improbable that any such insurrection will take place; nor can we apprehend that this advice as to non-payment of rents will now be followed as such exhortations have recently been followed. But its folly and absurdity does not excuse its wickedness; and, in my opinion, its use, to say the very least of it, brings Michael Davitt clearly within the jurisdiction which the court is called upon at present to exercise. On the 26th November 1882, at a meeting held at St. Mullins, in the county of Carlow, for the purpose of founding a branch of the National League, Mr. T. Healy made a speech in which he made use of the following language. Impressing on them the necessity of organization, he said, "The British Government in Ireland, which was simply a system of land piracy, was upheld simply by organization. The police they saw there were simply the officers of what they might call the Government League. The Government of this country, being as it was an organization against the will of the people, was simply an organization of so many pirates and so many brigands. It was entitled to the same moral respect as a cut-purse, who held a revolver at your head, and said to you, 'Your money or your life.'" Is it necessary to say that such language is clearly and grossly seditious, calculated to bring the Government of Her Majesty into hatred and contempt, and its use affords grounds abundantly sufficient to induce, or rather call upon, this Court to exercise the same jurisdiction.

With respect to Patrick Quinn, it appears upon the affidavits that at a meeting at Ross, in the county of Meath, called for the purpose of establishing another branch of the same National League, Mr. P. J. Quinn made a speech, in which, after stating he had been arrested with many others as a suspect, and detained in prison ten months, he proceeded, "Well, my friends, how did we come out of those prisons? We went in mild, but how did did we come out? We went in reformers, and we came out as rebels. (Sensation.) Nine hundred of us were thus imprisoned during the term of the Coercion Act. What are those nine hundred doing now, and where are they? They were trained in the prisons, and are now spread over the country from the Giant's Causeway to Cork, and from Dublin to my native county, and those are the men who are now inculcating the minds of our countrymen in their duties towards their native land; inculcating such advice, it may be assumed, as rebels usually offer." In another passage he says, "Our enemies have boasted that the Land League is dead. Well, it has been declared illegal. True, its flags are not seen here to-day; no banner bears its inscription here, but the banners on which it appears are carefully rolled up and hidden past for a future time, when they shall expand themselves in the breeze," and so forth. That is, the resuscitation of an organized body declared illegal, and for the present dormant, is announced and advocated. He then proceeds, "I will make one remark to the farmers; they did not obey our words of advice they received from the prison, 'pay no rent.' Till they come to this the people have not come to a right conclusion. Pay no rent, and when the agent, the bailiff and satrap of the landlord comes, button up your pockets, and when they come again the farmers know what to do." This portion of the speech brings the case exactly with that of Mr. Feehan, in which a general exhortation to the tenants of a landlord owner to pay no rent until a certain evicted tenant should be restored to his holding, was held by this court to justify magistrates in requiring sureties for good behaviour. Neither Mr. Davitt or T. Healy offered any evidence. Quinn made an affidavit in which he simply stated that the report of his speech was not a full or accurate report, but he did not deny that he had made use of language of similar import. None of the three respondents have made any apology, or said anything approaching to an apology, nor a word that could mean that they intended to desist from holding such language in the future. T. Healy, on the contrary, had the hardihood to state in court that he had made very many much worse speeches, and that he intended to continue making them. Now, having regard to all the circumstances of these cases, recollecting that these speeches were addressed by conspicuous persons to large bodies of people, and that those made by T. Healy and Michael Davitt were manifestly intended to be reported, and have been reported in public journals having a wide circulation, copies of which have been handed up to the court; such speeches being attended with danger to the public tranquillity, as I think they are, in my opinion the officers of the Crown were well advised to make the application they have made to the Supreme Court of Criminal Judisdiction, and not to any inferior tribunal. I think the Court clearly possesses jurisdiction to make the orders sought.

The responsible officers of the Crown have applied to us to exercise the preventive jurisdiction in the present case, and I think the application must be granted.

JUDGMENT delivered by the Right Honourable Judge Lawson in the Cases of ex parte Seymour v. Davitt, ex parte Bearns v. Healy, and ex parte Seymour v. Quinn, on the 24th day of January 1883.

(Reported by Jones H. Stavely, Barrister-at-Law.)

In these cases of Davitt, Healy, and Quinn, I desire to state in a few words the reasons which have led me to concur in the judgment of the court. We are asked on the motion of Her Majesty's Attorney General to make an order compelling the traversers to give security for their good behaviour, and in default thereof to be committed to prison. The application is grounded upon the allegation that they have delivered speeches of a seditious tendency calculated to endanger the public peace, and that they intend to continue to do so unless prevented. Such applications are usually made to Justices at Petty Sessions, and recently orders made by them in such cases have been brought before this court by certiorari, with a view to quashing the orders, but they have been sustained after argument. These authorities are Reg. (Reynolds) v. the Justices of Cork, and Reg. (Feehan) v. the Justices of the Queen's County, both reported in the 10th Vol. of the Irish Reports. The judgments given in these cases exhaust the learning as to the jurisdiction of justices in such cases, and establish beyond all doubt the existence of such jurisdiction, and that its exercise will in a proper case be upheld by the court. An application, however, to the Court of Queen's Bench in the first instance is in recent times not usual, and when the case was first mentioned to the court by the late Attorney General, it struck me as strange that we should be called upon to do what would appear to belong more properly to Justices at Petty Sessions. But if we possess the jurisdiction, and if the cases be such as call for its exercise, the reasons assigned by the Attorney General for applying to this court appear to possess considerable force. He says such cases are of frequent occurrence, that they involve a matter of great public importance and of wide application, and in order to prevent the necessity of many applications to justices in different and remote localities, he asks, not unreasonably, that this court should itself exercise the jurisdiction, and authoritatively expound the law, in order to guide the action of magistrates and others in similar cases. It appears to me, therefore, that only two questions arise for our judicial consideration: first, have we jurisdiction to make the orders sought; and secondly, are these three cases such as in their circumstances call for the exercise of this jurisdiction?

As to the first question, it does not in my mind admit of any doubt whatever. Ordinary magistrates possess this power, and have continually exercised it from the earliest times, and the cases recently decided in this court have affirmed the legality of such action. It would certainly be a strange thing if we were to hold, as contended for by Mr. Adams in an able argument, that the judges of this High Court have a more limited jurisdiction in respect of the public peace than ordinary justices appointed by Commission. I am clearly of opinion that at common law, and independently of any statute, we as conservators of the peace have jurisdiction to require security for good behaviour from any person whose acts or speeches are shown to be likely to endanger the public peace. Our jurisdiction is entirely independent of the statute 34 Edward III., and the statute of 21 James I., or the corresponding statute of Charles I. in this country, which was passed in order to prevent abuses in the exercise of the jurisdiction by the Courts of Chancery and Queen's Bench, and prescribes the mode in which it is to be carried out.

It is only necessary to refer to the most elementary treatises on our law to establish this proposition. In 4 B. C. Comm. C. 18, the subject is fully explained, viz., the means of preventing offences; he says, "This preventive justice consists in obliging those persons whom there is probable ground to suspect of future misbehaviour, to stipulate with, and to give full assurance to the public that such offence as is apprehended shall not happen by finding pledges or securities for keeping the peace, or for their good behaviour." He says mention is made of this in the laws of Edward the Confessor: "tradat fidejussores de pace et legalitate tuendâ."

And he says, "Any justices of the peace by virtue of their commission, or those who are ex officio conservators of the peace, as was mentioned in a former volume, may demand such security according to their own discretion; or it may be granted at the request of any subject upon due cause shown." We turn to Vol. I., c. 9, where he says, "The Lord Chancellor, &c., and all the Justices of the Court of King's Bench, by virtue of their offices, are general conservators of the peace throughout the whole kingdom, and may commit all breakers of it, or bind them in recognizances to keep it." Therefore we, in exercising this jurisdiction, are not embarrassed by considering the precise import of the words "of evil fame" in the statute of Edward, or the construction of the words of the commission of the peace; we have only to consider whether the language or conduct complained of endangers, or is likely to endanger the public peace. Neither is this a case in which musty statutes and obsolete laws are called into existence in order to abridge the liberty of the subject and deprive him of his constitutional right to be tried by the ordinary course of law; if it were I should be no party to it. It is an act of prevention, and may be fitly used, though no offence actually indictable has been committed, and entails no hardship on those who intend, not to defy and outrage the law, but to conform to its just and reasonable requirements.

There comes the second question: do the acts and words of the parties charged before us call for the exercise of this salutary jurisdiction? Hawkins, book 1, chap. 28, lays down, "No one ought to be bound to the good behaviour for any rash, quarrelsome, or unmannerly words, unless they either directly tend to a breach of the peace, or to scandalise the Government by abasing those who are entrusted with the administration of justice." And he says, such recognizance will be forfeited "by speaking words tending to sedition." Now it appears in these cases, from the affidavits before us, and the reports of the speeches furnished to us, that they were delivered at public meetings to large numbers of persons, "held," to use the language of the affidavits, "in pursuance of an illegal combination against the payment of rent, and in consequence of which numerous crimes and outrages were committed in various parts of the country."

I have read the reports of these speeches, and in my opinion they far transcend the limits of just comment upon public affairs; it would be a very mild description of them to say they tend to sedition. They are, in my judgment, a distinct incentive to crime and outrage; I think it unnecessary to repeat the language here. Michael Davitt, in effect, invites to civil war when he points to the possible incursion of hordes from Donegal and Connemara to take possession of the fertile lands of Meath; he advises the people not to pay any rent from November till next May, unless, forsooth, Mr. Gladstone will comply with Mr. Davitt's requirements.

Mr. Healy describes the British Government in Ireland as "a system of land piracy, and being an organization against the will of the people, was simply an organization of so many pirates and so many brigands, and was entitled to the same moral respect as the wishes of a man who held a revolver to your head, and said, 'Your money or your life.'" And, in no ambiguous terms, he advises his hearers not to pay the judicial rents any more than the former rents. We may well ask, how is it possible that Government can be carried on; that peace can be preserved, or Her Majesty's subjects be protected from outrage and assassination if such meetings and speeches are allowed to pass unchecked.

Mr. Quinn's speech is to the same effect, and very little less violent than those of his companions.

We are asked, then, by the Attorney General, as conservators of the public peace, to put this jurisdiction in force in order to prevent the recurrence of these things. The case has been met by the traversers in a very defiant manner. Mr. Healy boasted that he had had since made many speeches as criminal, and would continue to do so. He alleges that other persons in high positions have made use of language as seditious as his. With that we are not concerned even if true, which I do not believe it is, and it affords no argument when addressed to a judicial tribunal.

It may be that the remedy sought for by this application may be wholly inadequate or insufficient to meet this state of things; upon that I express no opinion; it is a matter for the Executive Government of the country to consider. Our duty is plain and clear to deal with the case before us according to law.

JUDGMENT delivered by the Right Honourable Mr. Justice Barry in the Case of ex parte C. E. Seymour v. Davitt, &c. &c., on the 24th day of January 1883.

(Reported by Jones H. Stavely, Barrister-at-Law.)

After the able and exhaustive judgments just delivered, it is only necessary for me to say that I concur in the opinion that this order should be made. In the addresses delivered at the bar by the defendants, Messrs. Davitt and Healy, a great deal was urged or suggested to the effect that in instituting this proceeding the Government displayed political, and some of its members personal, inconsistency; and that the Government, whatever may be the legal position of the case, acted unconstitutionally in adopting this form of procedure instead of submitting their complaint, if they have one, to the determination of a jury. I need scarcely say that on these points I, directly or indirectly, offer no opinion; in fact I can best describe my state of mind by saying that I am not conscious of having formed any opinion. I confine myself to the only two questions submitted to us for determination, namely, first, has this Court jurisdiction to make the order applied for by the Attorney General; and, secondly, are the facts such as to entitle him to demand at our hands the exercise of that jurisdiction? Now, as to the jurisdiction, I confess that if, as has been mooted during the argument, the origin of, and sole foundation for, requiring persons to find sureties for good behaviour on such a charge as that put forward by the Crown in this case was the language of the Statute 34 Edward III., respecting "them that be not of good fame," I should hesitate, in the absence of any authority, and there is none, to hold that the provisions of that Statute could by a sort of implication be held to extend not merely to the local justices who were to be appointed under its direction, but to this Court. It might be, no doubt, a very anomalous state of things that local justices should possess a jurisdiction which this Court would not possess, but even the existence of such an anomaly could not affect the construction of the language, if otherwise clear and unambiguous. It was argued for the Crown that the words "process of the peace and good behaviour" in the Statute 10 & 11 Car. 1, c. 10 (Irish), must have reference to or include all cases, whether originating in the Statute of Edward III. or otherwise. But this is by no means necessarily so. It does not seem disputed that not only this Court, but local justices, possessed power irrespective of the Statute of Edward III. to hold persons to good behaviour in certain cases, and the words of the Statute of Car. I. would be satisfied by referring them to the issuing of process in such cases. But I do not think it necessary in this case to have recourse to a construction so forced of the Statute of Edward III. as that it created a novel jurisdiction, and merely by implication conferred it upon this Court. I am disposed to hold, and as present advised would hold, that the Statute of Edward III. created no new jurisdiction, and that the true construction and result of the Statute is that it directed local justices to be appointed throughout the kingdom, and it then proceeds in general terms to describe the powers to be possessed and exercised by these magistrates; powers, some of them, perhaps, new to local justices, but previously possessed and exerciseable by this Court and the other high tribunals or functionaries entrusted with the conservation of the public peace and good order.

But whatever may be the construction or effect of the Statute of Edward III., whether it created any new jurisdiction and conferred it upon this Court, or whether it merely conferred upon the new local magistrates a jurisdiction primarily existing in other tribunals, I am of opinion that in a case like the present, where the charge against the defendants is the public utterance of language of a seditious character, calculated to endanger the public peace and promote public disorder, in such a case I am of opinion that, irrespective of the Statute of Edward III., or any other Statute, this Court possesses, and has possessed from the earliest times, an original inherent jurisdiction to entertain such a charge, and if it be established to issue process of good behaviour against the defendants.

The only question then remaining is, has the charge been established in evidence? The affidavits filed for the Crown primâ facie sustain the charge; no affidavits in contradiction have been filed by Messrs. Healy and Davitt; an affidavit has been filed by Mr. Quinn, but of a character so vague as not to amount to any contradiction or qualification of the evidence adduced by the Crown. Under these circumstances I am of opinion that the Court has no alternative but to make the order applied for.

DUBLIN SPECIAL COMMISSION COURT (CASE OF FRANCIS HYNES).

RETURN to an Order of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 1 December 1882;—for,

COPY "of Two LETTERS of Mr. Callan, M.P., under Date of the 25th or 26th days of August and the 31st day of August or the 1st day of September, addressed to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and the REPLY thereto."

Mr. Callan, M.P., to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

52, Claverton-street, St. George's-road, London, S.W.,
My Lord, Friday, 25 August 1882.

IN the matter of the Hynes' jury case I have, so far, neither interfered nor even expressed any opinion, publicly nor privately, directly nor indirectly; nor would I intervene now, were it not for the announcement, made known through the Press, that your Excellency "has no intention of holding any public inquiry into the matter;" and as I infer from Mr. R. G. C. Hamilton's letter of the 21st instant that the inquiry of your Excellency into the conduct of the jury will, so far at least as the adverse allegations impugning their conduct, be confined to the consideration of the affidavits forwarded to your Excellency by Mr. Sexton, M.P., I consider it my duty, indeed I feel I have no alternative, but to make known to your Excellency evidence of a most important nature which has just come to my knowledge.

On the night of Friday, 11th August, a gentleman of high professional standing and personal character, happened (en route for England, where he now is) to stay at the Imperial Hotel, Dublin. He states that, on the night in question, he was an eye-witness of the conduct of the jury in the Hynes case, which he considered discreditable in the extreme. In the public billiard-room of the hotel some of the jury mixed and conversed, and drank freely with strangers. Three of the jury were under the influence of drink, more especially one whom he describes as "racing" after the female employés of the establishment; and he further says that the affidavits read in the House of Commons last night week were not only substantially true, but convey a very mitigated impression of the scene.

The gentleman (a slight résumé of whose evidence I give) has been, and is, personally and politically, strongly opposed to the party with whom he, William O'Brien, is identified. He is an extensive land agent, and both his sympathies and personal interests are bound up with the landlord class. He is also a solicitor, and, I understand, personally known to the Attorney General for Ireland. He has left London for the Isle of Wight, where he is at present on his vacation, and whence I understand he does not purpose returning for some considerable time.

If your Excellency wishes, before deciding "whether there are any sufficient grounds for interfering with the due course of the law," to examine into the statements of this gentleman (though I am assured he will neither be a "volunteer" witness nor yet swear an affidavit), I have no doubt he will not hesitate, if called upon by your Excellency, to depose on oath to the matters within his own knowledge, and of which he was an eye-witness on the night in question.

I remain here for the next few days, and will be ready to give all particulars to any one your Excellency may appoint to take the evidence of this gentleman, who, I am informed, would exceedingly dislike to have his name mentioned, at least publicly, in this matter; but in such a momentous matter, involving as it does a question of life or death, mere personal considerations of such a nature must stand aside.

I have, &c.
(signed) Philip Callan.

To His Excellency
The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland,
The Castle, Dublin.

The other letter referred to in the Order is merely a letter enclosing a copy of the above, and stating that no reply had been received.

Mr. Courtenay Boyle to Mr. Callan, M.P.

Sir, The Castle, Dublin, 2 September 1882.

I AM directed by the Lord Lieutenant to acknowledge your letter of 25th August, and to say that, having considered the whole circumstances connected with the alleged irregularities of the jurors in the case of Queen v. Hynes, he does not think it necessary to call for further evidence than that which has been before him.

I am, &c.
(signed) Courtenay Boyle,
Private Secretary.

Philip Callan, Esq., M.P.
